About Radhika
Radhika Puri is a former business journalist. While working in India, she won the World Press Institute Media Fellowship. This gave her the chance to explore the United States alongside other international journalists, and better understand the country. In 2002, she won the Polestar award, an Indian award for excellence in journalism, for her coverage of the Internet phenomenon that year. Radhika moved to Indonesia with her husband in 2005. There, she dabbled in some writing, but spent more time enjoying the country’s beauty. In 2007, she moved to Singapore and now works at the Institute of Water Policy at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy as a research associate.

The Fibonacci Revelation
First, a warning, then a threat.
An attack that leaves a series of seemingly-innocuous historical photos destroyed.
A coded message that no one sees...

No one, except Owen, the school’s resident freak. Only Owen can see the obscure mathematical concepts behind the clues. Only he can see the patterns behind the chaos. It’s up to him, and his only friend Clara to follow the strange clues to uncover a dark secret before it is too late.

A Mountain of Fire

In a village on Mount Merapi, 11-year-old Fitri and her brother Agus watch anxiously as the volcano comes to life. Then, the siblings stumble upon a cave!

What could be hidden there?

But someone is watching them. What could this man possibly want from Fitri and Agus? The answer could lie in Fitri’s strange and frightening dreams about the Merapi. They seem to be telling her something…
